A $3.2 million, 26,000 square foot construction of the new North Side headquarters.

A. Martini & Co. was a great partner throughout design and construction. Their input during the design phase helped us to make the right decisions in order to maximize the client's return on construction costs. During construction, their on-site staff worked tirelessly to accommodate the Humane Society's daily operations and minimize disruptions due to the tight building site.

A. Martini & Co.'s service and commitment to this project was terrific. The firm's owners were accessible and resourceful. The crew, especially their job superintendent, provided excellent support and skills. Overall, we received great value on this project.

The 26,000 square foot Western Pennsylvania Humane Society's new two-story headquarters includes offices, training areas, veterinarian facilities, and kennels. For this project, A. Martini & Co. collaborated early in the process with both the client and architect to review designs and offer suggestions for cost efficiencies. They also successfully met many site challenges during construction. The street and buildings adjacent to the site were "shored up" to prevent damage. The building activities were managed so that the existing facility, also adjacent to the new building's site, remained open during construction.
